“ Jim was a kind and smart man, he loved to read self improvement books and watch Si-Fi shows and eat peanuts. He had a love for the outdoors and bike riding. Jim was a man of God and his love for the Lord grew stronger as he got older. As a father he would teach his son about patience, understanding communication and kindness. Jim became a grandfather in 2003 and when he saw his grandkids he would melt with joy. As his son I can say I was very lucky to have him as my father and miss him dearly. He loved his family and had many stories of his time with them. His faith in the Lord was so strong, there's no doubt he is with the Lord waiting to reunite with this loved ones still here.
