“ Growing up in Lebanon, NH, Marcia was one of my “big” cousins being a few years older. I have fond memories of Marcia and Aunt Muzzy. My brother Ken and I used to ride our bikes a half-dozen blocks to her home on Mascoma Street to visit. Marcia would whip up a batch of praline sweets for her cousins. Life seemed much more simple back then. I pass on my condolences to family and friends.

“ Marcie Mae, I called her. It wasn't her name, but it stuck. In a world heavy with weeds, she was a rose.
I taught her to make dolls. She taught me to pick up stitches along the heel of a sock. She was the best knitter I've ever known.
And the worst drinker. She liked Margaritas.
She hated snakes. She liked to laugh.
She had a heart bigger than the body that housed it.
She was the best mother, the best grandmother. She loved her kids and her grandkids beyond measure—oh yes, and her pups.
She mothered my daughter, rocked my grandkids when I couldn't.
She listened hard, spoke softly, and understood pain.
And I know-- just know--her laughter is ringing out all over God's heaven.

“ Only Marcie would remember the time we were sitting in the lounge at a Marriott in DC for a doll convention.....we were roomies many times and I’ll treasure the happy memories and fun times. Marcie was a gentle soul and she had a great sense of humor. She kept us laughing. Her family was her life. She loved and was so proud of them all. We came to know them through her stories. My prayers go out to all the family. Tweetie, I will miss you. HHKK
