“ Nick,
Of all the memories I have of you my favorite ones are the ones when we would share the dance floor. Nicolas didn't dance but you did. You brought so much joy and laughter to your loved ones. You were a man of honor and grace. You will be missed.

Nick.

I cherish the memories I have of you. You were always a good brother to me and gave me direction when I was very young. I remember how your letters uplifted my spirit when I joined the Navy. Although, I didn't see much of you in the autumn of your years you were never far from my heart and mind.

Nick:

I never got to meet you personally, but your mother was a great friend of my Grandma Frutosa. In fact, your mom wet-nursed me once as a child when the two comadres were left to babysit while mom and dad went to the movies. Although she lived well into her 90's, she never failed to remind me what a traumatic experience that was for all three of us!

As an adult, your mom inspired me with her courage and tenacity fighting off a would-be attacker who tried to steal her purse; dancing all night at a party and closing the place down while I waited patiently and admiringly to take her home; singing love songs and corridas with her sons; and enjoying the laughter and mirth of each new grandchild as she frolicked with them on the grass even well into her 90's.

Your name was mentioned often as the first-born of her many children. In reading the posts of others, I can better appreciate the legacy of love and generosity that is the trademark of your family name. You may not have a coat of arms, but you certainly deserve one! You touched many lives and motivated many people in the communities where you lived and served. You did this by your shining example savoring the joy of each moment and never languishing in self-pity, judgment or condemnation. Instead, you apparently used each life experience as a "teachable moment" for those who would come after you.

You may have moved on to Denver and Thornton, but you came home to where you started to demonstrate the proud legacy of the founders of our Salt Creek community. On behalf of us all, I humbly thank you.
